

3 10 The famous plant collector from Co. Tyrone, Augustine Henry (1857-1930), discovered hundreds of Chinese species that became popular in European gardens.

This Red tour, to the river and back, features wildlife, plant hunting, phenology and philosophy.

Explore more!

For more information about the gardens, other tours, events and activities, visit www.botanicgardens.ie

Practicalities

The tour starts inside the main entrance gate. Follow the Red signs, and when you see the numbered audio sign, play the corresponding audio track. The gardens are open 9am-5pm weekdays, 10am-6pm at weekends March to October, and till 4.30pm in Winter. T +353 1 857 0909

Android users

Acknowledgements

Written and narrated
Matthew Jebb, director, National Botanic Gardens; Mary Mulvihill, Ingenious Ireland

Wildlife guide
Glynn Anderson

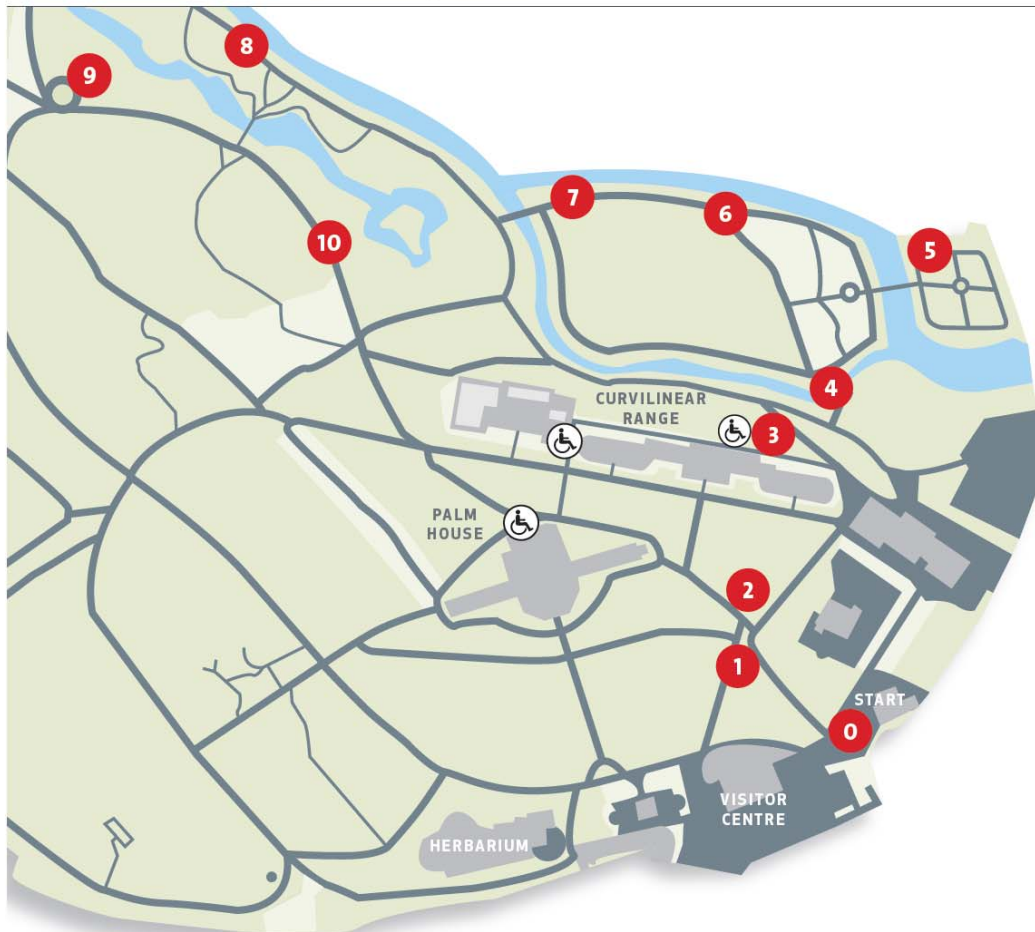

Music
'The Last Rose of Summer', Aoife O'Sullivan (soprano), Mairead Hurley (piano)

Sound production
Twintrack Media

Design
Carton LeVert

© National Botanic Gardens and Ingenious Ireland/Mary Mulvihill 2010.

Funded by
Department of Tourism, Culture and Sport under the Cultural Technology Grant Scheme, 2010.

Contents

Allow about an hour for the tour

- 0 Welcome
- 1 'For couples with a wicked mind'
- 2 The alphabet tree with many names
- 3 The golden age of plant collecting.
- 4 Waterpower, ponds and paper
- 5 A history of the world
- 6 Kingfishers and sparrowhawks
- 7 The soul of a plant
- 8 The phenological garden and climate change
- 9 The chain tent
- 10 The search for the handkerchief tree

Other Tours

The Green tour explores the famous glasshouses for fascinating stories about exotic plants, while the Yellow tour explores the Gardens' historic highlights.